

Proposed new Policy

December 18, 2020

Copyright Policy

This copyright policy sets out how users are permitted to use our content and also explains the types of use that require the written permission of the Board. This policy forms part of our terms and conditions. We reserve the right to change our copyright policy from time to time by publishing an updated policy on AIASB.com, which shall become effective and replace any previous policy with effect from publication. This version of the copyright policy was published on December 18, 2020.

What is Copyright?

Copyright law gives the copyright owner the exclusive right to control the use of copyright protected works. All of the material produced by AIA Santa Barbara (AIASB,) AIASB Committees or others under the direction of AIASB and other digital/wireless platforms is protected by copyright law and should only be used as set out in the "How may I use AIASB content?" section below. Use that is made without our permission may therefore infringe our copyright which can result in personal and corporate liability. Where we state below that something is not allowed or permitted, then to do so is a breach of our terms and conditions: that is, it is a breach of contract, and may also violate copyright law.

How may I use AIASB content?

You may do the following:

View our content for your personal use on any device that is compatible with AIASB.com (this might be your PC, laptop, smartphone, tablet or other mobile device) and store our content on that device for your personal use; print single copies of articles on paper for your personal use; Share links to materials with modification to others.

How may I republish or redistribute AIASB content?

Except as set out above, you may not copy AIASB content or any third-party source of AIASB content and you may not republish or redistribute full content, for example by pasting them into emails or republishing them in any media, including websites, newsletters or intranets.

We recognize that users of the Internet want to share information with others. We therefore permit limited republishing and redistribution of AIASB content as set out below provided that this does not create a Substitute for AIASB's own material or services. We define a Substitute as a product or service that reduces the need for users or other third parties to seek that content directly, or which creates revenue from the AIASB's content to the detriment of AIASB's own ability to generate revenues from that content.

As long as you do not create a Substitute, you may do the following:

Publish online, the original AIASB content and a link to the content and the first 140 characters of an article (what we call teaser text);

Forward the original content, links and teaser text to other individuals.

Download our content and view them for your personal use.

AIA
Santa Barbara

If you have any questions on copyright or republishing our material, please contact info@AIASB.com